This tragic photograph was taken from the British cruiser Arethusa, which dropped out of the running fight to rescue as many Germans as might be. The Bluecher is seen capsizing to starboard so swiftly that the water is cascading from her bilge keel. Her upper works are smashed and fires are raging forward and amidships. The surviving officers stand grouped astern. Scores of the crew are climbing down the side or dropping into the sea, where their heads show as dark spots. One man has reached the bilge keel. Many stood fast and sang "Die Wacht Am Rhein" as the ship sank under them. The stump of the tripod forecast shows at the left and the 8.2-inch guns are pointing skyward from their turrets. Of the Bluecher's crew of 885 fewer than 150 survived.

MONGOLIAN GRAVE PERIL OF SINKING

Leaking Allan Liner, with 200 Passengers on Board, Sends Out New Call for Assistance in Her Struggle to Reach Halifax Port

The leaking Allan liner Mongolian, with 200 passengers aboard, which was last reported as being rescued and conveyed toward Halifax, N. S., by the United States coast guard cutter Seneca, is in new peril of foundering according to dispatches last evening from Halifax. The Seneca, being a small vessel, could not furnish sufficient help, it is feared, particularly in the heavy gale now blowing.

The Halifax dispatches said that the Red Cross steamer Stephano, which was sent out from St. John's, N. F., on the Mongolian's first call for aid, but which turned back when the Seneca reached the distressed liner, had suddenly been called again to help the Mongolian. When the Stephano first turned back the Mongolian was 800 miles off Cape Race.

The wind is blowing a gale along the Nova Scotia coast. The Mongolian was limping along at ten knots an hour under her own steam when the Seneca standing by. It was first said that the liner would make Halifax today, providing no storm arose. The rising gale, however, caused grave fears for the liner and the sudden call for the Stephano to start on her rescue errand again yesterday afternoon, indicated that the Mongolian, with all aboard, is in increasing danger.

The 200 passengers aboard the Mongolian were taken on at St. John's for Glasgow. The Mongolian is 295 feet long and of 4,700 tons gross register. She left Philadelphia the first of the month for Glasgow, with St. John's as a port of call.

She arrived in that city on February 5, took on the 200 passengers and started out without delay for her transatlantic run. On February 7 the liner returned to St. John's for repairs. It was reported that she had struck a rock in the St. John's narrows and had fractured a plate, causing a leak. Repairs were made and the Mongolian made a fresh start on February 15.

Lawley, Noted Boatbuilder, Is Dead at 92

"Uncle" George Lawley, said to be the oldest boat-builder in the United States, who built the cup defender Portland, Jubilee and Mayflower, died yesterday afternoon at the age of ninety-two, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emma McKean, 309 East Fifth street, South Boston. Burial took place in the cemetery at South Boston. Although he retired from active business in 1891, old George Lawley found his chief delight in visiting the shipyard in Nahant conducted by his sons George F. and Edwin A. He is said to have offered suggestions in the creation of the candidate defender Vanitie last summer. He retained his faculties and enthusiasm until the end.

The funeral will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, West Broadway.

Announce Cure for Hay Fever Victims

At a dinner of the Academy of Oesopathic Physicians at the Hotel Thurland last night, Dr. H. T. Crawford of Boylston street, announced that oesopathy has a new cure for hay fever. He explained that Dr. James D. Edwards of St. Louis, the man who discovered the oesopathic treatment for catarrhal deafness, has just proclaimed a similar treatment for hay fever. This is accomplished by the surgeon's finger in the nose and throat of the patient, without use of instruments or of medicine.

Senator Walsh's Daughter Engaged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The engagement of Miss Genevieve Walsh, daughter of United States Senator and ex-Governor of Massachusetts, to a young man, a son of the late Senator, was announced today by her parents.

The wedding will take place in Washington April 5.

FLOOD PERIL OF MERRIMAC RIVER GROWS

Mills at Manchester Forced to Suspend by Ice Choking Canals; Forty-Foot Ice Jam Gaining in Volume at Sewall's Falls

Reports received from Manchester, N. H., yesterday state that the Merrimac River is higher at that point than for many years. The water is five and a half feet above the Amesbury Falls. Several of the mills, which receive their power from the river, were forced to temporarily suspend for work in their establishments, when a large quantity of ice flowed into the canal.

As ice jam forty feet high has collected a short distance above the city at Sewall's Falls. This is reported to be rapidly gaining in volume, but it is holding fast. It is feared that much damage will result if this mass ever breaks.

The waters of the Merrimac, which had flooded the river-front streets at Concord, N. H., have receded, but high piles of ice, some over thirty feet high, were deposited in the roads. Efforts are being made to remove these obstructions. The waters at Brattleboro, Vt., are also receding. At this point railroad officials found it necessary to delay several trains on account of huge ice piles which had been deposited on the tracks. For a time it was feared that the railroad bridge would be destroyed, but such a loss was prevented by dynamiting the ice.

WARM HEARING AT FERNCROFT VOTES INQUIRY

Middleton Collector Young Admits Poll Taxes of 26 Waiters Were Paid by One Check; Receipt Was Sent to Mansfield

As the result of a tribulation hearing before the Middlesex Board of Registrars on charges that twenty-six waiters were illegally registered from Ferncroft Inn, Albert E. Henderson, leader of the Iowa Good Government Association, will challenge the twenty-six alleged illegal voters at the Iowa election tomorrow. Attorney Henry Rand, who represented the citizens at the meeting, declared that he will eventually bring this matter to the attention of District Attorney Michael A. Sullivan.

At this hearing, which adjourned amid great cheering and hissing after midnight, Tax Collector Henry A. Young admitted that the poll taxes of the entire twenty-six were paid in a check. He also testified that he had sent a receipt for the tax money to Ferncroft Inn, to Mansfield.

Mr. Young could not "distinctly remember" who sent him the check, but it was either from Johnson (first name not given), from Henry A. Allen, recently president of the inn, or from Henry B. Bond of Boston, counsel for Albert P. Henderson, the petitioner for the hearing, and other Middleton citizens who seek to have the twenty-six strikers from the voting list and thus overturn last year's bare majority of five by which the town went for license.

Darryl K. Mansfield was in the front row backed by Attorney Sullivan and Ronan. He was willing, even anxious to testify. But Sullivan would not permit. After his opening remarks, in which he claimed that the twenty-six men were brought to Ferncroft by Mansfield and his lieutenants on March 31 last, were registered on April 1, and have now returned to vote, Mr. Bond called for the twenty-six summonses to appear. In support of the right of the allies to take such drastic measures, he will urge the Germans have violated all the codes of warfare in sinking ships with no complaints abroad without warring and without even making efforts to save the lives of the persons thus treacherously attacked.

SEAMEN'S BILL IS NOW UP TO WILSON

Measure Agreed Upon in Conference Passes Senate Without a Roll Call.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The La Follette-Alexander seamen's bill as agreed upon in conference of the two houses and as adopted in the House today, passed the Senate without a roll call.

A motion by Senator Smith of Georgia to "reconsider" the roll call was defeated by a vote of 13 to 33. The bill now goes to the President, who already has indicated it.

A GOOD BOY WITH A BAD PAIR OF SHOES

The Story of Peter Jesswyn

"Next Move Should Be to Buy New Suits Now"

By JAMES M. CURLEY,
Mayor of Boston.

Mayor James M. Curley.

Give away your old clothes and buy your new suits now. There is no more practicable way to assist the unemployed than to follow out the principles set forth in the AMERICAN'S "Give a Bundle" and it's "Buy Now" movements.

The fact that more than 5,000 Boston families will be benefited by the "Bundle" movement is delightful news. The AMERICAN has earned the thanks of the people in this work.

Every out-of-work householder who is fortified in his search for employment by the present of a decent suit, is another asset to the city. All such men will be strengthened by the knowledge that they present a satisfactory appearance when looking for work.

But that isn't enough. To make the object lesson doubly effective, all who can do so should buy their new suits now. That means more work for the unemployed, the putting of thousands more of the now idle toilers back in the shops.

Although not in any immediate need of them, I have ordered a new dress suit, a new Spring suit and another new suit for business wear, placing these orders with three different tailors to help make the thing more effective.

Under ordinary circumstances I should not have bought the dress suit until next Fall, and the other orders could have been deferred for quite a while.

If every other citizen in a position to do so will take similar action and buy his new suits now, in line with the AMERICAN'S "Buy Now" movement, Boston wouldn't have any unemployed garment workers.

Carried to their logical conclusions, the "Give a Bundle" and "Buy Now" movements of the AMERICAN will bring lasting relief and industrial content to all out of work bread-winners in the community.

"Proved Itself to Be Most Commendable Effort"

THE RT. REV. SAMUEL G. BABCOCK.

Episcopal suffragan bishop of the diocese of Massachusetts.

Rt. Rev. S. G. Babcock.

Giving a bundle of clothing to the needy in this city has proved itself to be a most commendable movement.

Think of the many deserving people of this city whose lives have been brightened in this simple way by the coming of a bundle into their homes where there has been so much anxiety, in all probability, resulting from lack of work for some time.

Think of the mothers who have watched the children once more clothed in better shape. Think of the fathers who have taken delight in getting this much help, who have sought in vain for work. This great enterprise on the part of a large newspaper is bound to express this feeling, that there is a great deal of kindness in the world after all, which needs some such occasion as this to call it forth. People are after all willing to share with others less unfortunate than themselves. Bundle Day has made this evident.

"It Is Indeed Something to Be Proud Of"

By JOSEPH C. PELLETIER.

District Attorney of Suffolk County.

Dist. Atty. J. C. Pelletier.

That thousands of the city's unfortunate poor are to be made happier as a result of the Boston AMERICAN'S "Bundle Day" is striking proof of the great merit of the plan and of its tremendous success.

The AMERICAN is to be congratulated for its efforts in this direction. It was a move which deserved the hearty support of the public, a support which the public so generously accorded that 5,000 bundles of garments have been contributed. It is indeed something to be proud of.

The poor, especially at this season, need clothing, and "Bundle Day" is a most admirable way of providing it free of cost to them. Those that contributed can be proud of their donations in such a cause, and the AMERICAN is to be congratulated for what it is doing.

"Mighty and Glorious Undertaking for People"

By FORMER MAYOR THOMAS N. HART of Boston.

Ex-Mayor T. N. Hart.

The distribution of bundles among those needing them met with my approbation from the very first.

It has proven that if you make a way to help people in a practical manner the people will respond.

This was a mighty undertaking to distribute five thousand bundles of clothing, but if in so doing you have made ten thousand people happy, what a glorious undertaking it was.

I congratulate the Boston AMERICAN upon its enterprising spirit in looking after the needs of the people and in getting this great response to its calls for bundles.

'BUNDLE DAY' DISTRIBUTION IS TOMORROW

More Than 5,000 Packages of Clothing Gathered by the American to Be Given to the Worthy Poor from No. 11 Wareham St.

Monday is distribution day for the bundles. Have your red tickets ready. Tomorrow was agreed upon by the Boston Bundle Day Committee at their meeting yesterday at the head quarters, No. 8 Winter street. All the members of the committee were present.

There are more than 5,000 bundles of clothing to be distributed. Before this is done every article will be thoroughly inspected by the Board of Health.

Remember the place for distribution of bundles is No. 11 Wareham street, and the time from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.

From the Back Bay and Brookline more than 85 per cent. of the bundles have been gathered. Some have come from New Hampshire and other parts of New England.

Many well known persons have been interested in this movement and have contributed largely to make it a success.

When Cardinal O'Connell learned yesterday of the extraordinary results of the movement he said:

"Any charitable work for the relief of the poor at this time is deserving of the highest praise."

BRING RED TICKET.

Those who come for bundles must present a red card which has been furnished by members of the committee. These cards have been sent to every charitable organization of Boston. They have been given to the most worthy in every section of the city.

Don't come to the place of distribution without one of these tickets, and come within the hours of 10 and 6.

John T. Joyce of the Massachusetts State Branch of A. F. of M. will have fourteen men on hand Monday, under his direction, from the Electrical Union Workers' Union, No. 162, and from the Central Labor Union Employment Committee, to look after the work.

Mrs. Stephen H. Hobbs, wife of the Rev. Dr. Hobbs, pastor of the Second Universalist Church, will superintend the distribution of the articles among women and children. She will be assisted by Mrs. Arthur Gray of Watertown, Mrs. W. C. Henry of Newbury street, Mrs. Fred E. J. Dowling of Boston, and Mrs. Albert Dimes of the Junior Charity Club.

Some households have contributed as many as thirteen bundles.

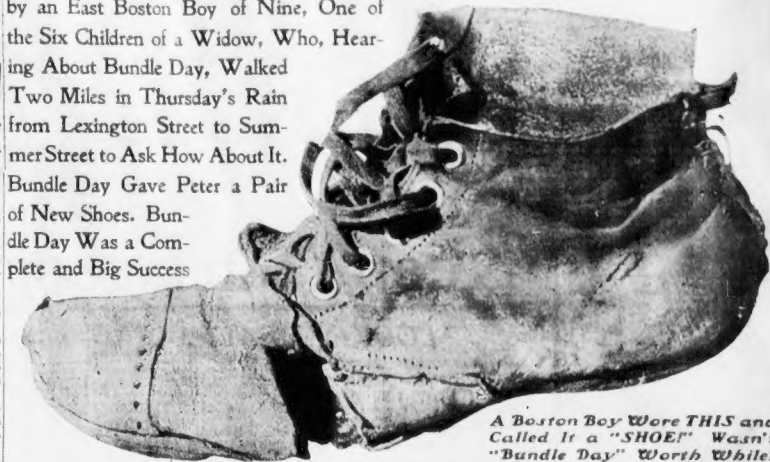

ALL IN GOOD CONDITION. Many of the bundles contain men's clothing in addition to clothing for women and children. All the articles are in good condition.

Some of the letters written to the committee by persons temporarily embarrassed by lack of work, asking for clothing are pathetic. Many of them come from widows with small children who have suffered for some time.

Mrs. Robin, who has given much time and thought to the movement, said yesterday: "From the letters I received since this enterprise began through the agency of the Boston AMERICAN, I am satisfied we have met by this bundle campaign a real need in the community."

Other members of the committee gave their experience. Mrs. Frank W. Lucas, Mrs. Albert Dimes and Mrs. Fred E. J. Dowling told of many instances where the bundles will do much good.

The Mate of This Shoe Couldn't Stand Up to Be Photographed. They Were Worn by an East Boston Boy of Nine, One of the Six Children of a Widow, Who, Hearing About Bundle Day, Walked Two Miles in Thursday's Rain from Lexington Street to Summer Street to Ask How About It. Bundle Day Gave Peter a Pair of New Shoes. Bundle Day Was a Complete and Big Success

A Boston Boy Wore This and Called It a "SHOE" Wasn't "Bundle Day" Worth While!

By BARRINGTON WELLS.

"MY name is Peter Jesswyn," said the boy. "I am nine years old. I live in Lexington street, East Boston. A man over there told me about Bundle Day. Is this the place?"

Noonan, who sometimes guards the door, said yes, this was the place. Noonan is twenty now, and a cub reporter, but once upon a time Noonan was an office boy, not very much bigger than Peter Jesswyn.

"What about Bundle Day?" Noonan wanted to know, and Peter Jesswyn answered him in one word.

"Shoes," he said.

He held out one foot and Noonan saw what little Peter called shoes. You should have seen them.

We have photographed one of these "shoes," and O, mothers and fathers of New England, we ask you to consider it this Sabbath morning. Three days ago a bright, little Boston boy wore this article and its mate, and called them shoes!

It was raining.

"How did you get over here?" Noonan wanted to know, for Lexington street in East Boston, he it understood, is all of two miles from 80 Summer.

"Walked!" said Peter Jesswyn, adding, with a smile that would have won your hearts, "I suppose you thought I came over in my lemonize!"

Noonan laughed with him; and then, breaking all the rules that had been established for the distribution of your Bundle Day gifts, took Master Peter below to one of the shipping wagons, where the observant Noonan had noticed packing cases with shoes in them, and saw to it that the East Boston boy was properly and happily fitted.

Peter walked, he said, because he could not raise the nickel necessary for a fare.

"There are six of us," he explained, "five boys and a girl and my Ma has all she can do, I can tell you."

"How about the ferry?" asked Mr. Noonan.

"Aw," said Peter, "there was a good guy driving a delivery wagon, and I told him where I was coming, and he let me sneak under the seat. That's nothin'!"

Well, everybody, here is one of Peter Jesswyn's shoes. Every time Peter stepped a foot down one shoe said "squash," and the other answered "akweeje."

Let this shoe be a Sunday morning text for you, dearly beloved. Search your hearts for the sermon that should accompany it, remembering what He said: "A new commandment I give unto you, That we love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

Somebody may say that it would have been better to have told the story of little Peter and his shoes BEFORE Bundle Day, because of its appeal, but Peter didn't make an appearance until the Bundle Day Committee had stopped its canvass and was almost buried under Bundle Day contributions.

Let it be written here, and written large, that Bundle Day collections showed that Greater Boston is a community so generous that it has only to learn of distress in order to relieve it.

Those members of the AMERICAN staff who have had to do with both events had taken it for granted that they would never again see an exemplification of the Spirit of Giving as they saw it in connection with the Christmas Basket Fund.

These young gentlemen are glad to be able to acknowledge their mistakes!

The number of bundles contributed to the Bundle Day Committee is in excess of 4,000 and close to 5,000.

They filled the warehouse at No. 11 Wareham street in the South End, and are piled to the ceiling of a large room in the Elliot square storage warehouse at No. 288 Roxbury street.

A dozen motor trucks and more than forty wagons were used in the carting of bundles from the homes or business houses of donors to either of the storage places. In no case did the owner or driver of wagon ask for so much as a ten-cent piece. Everybody gave everything.

If there were a Gold Medal or a Blue Ribbon to confer upon the community making the best showing, everybody on Bundle Day Committee is agreed that the award would go to Brookline.

The "richest town in the world" Brookline has been called. To this title may now be fairly added "and the most generous."

Bundle DAY, indeed! Brookline had to have THREE of them.

Five auto trucks were hustled into Brookline on Wednesday to "clean up the town." They didn't half do it! When closing hour arrived, Brookline was still waiting with as many bundles more. Nor did Thursday night witness the cleanup of Brookline's generosity. On Friday again the trucks were hustled back to Generous Town.

The Back Bay, sometimes called "exclusive," was quite as generous; but for that matter Bundle Day was not only celebrated by every suburb, but by the good and the charitable in communities as far north as Meredith, N. H., and as far south as Buzzards Bay.

Three big bundles came from a good woman in Meredith. They were brought free of cost by the American Express Company. Bundle Day, by the way, might have been a failure without the expressmen, big and little, employers and employed. The Buzzards Bay gifts came up by parcel post.

The gift of one Boston woman was a sealskin coat, which many have seen a season or two, but which is still practically as good as new.

Another Daughter of the King contributed for the relief of her sisters a trunkful of absolutely new muslin underwear.

A well-known tobaccoist sent along a huge crate of smoking tobacco. "I didn't know what else to give," he explained, "and I'm sure there are good claps temporarily unemployed who will be glad to have their pipes filled."

The bulk of the gifts were articles of clothing. Nobody associated with the work had ever before seen so many overcoats at one time. Most of the men who enjoyed Bundle Day—the cheerful givers—appeared to have been moved by the thought that the thing to give was an overcoat. Many of these overcoats are quite as good as new. ALL of them are serviceable. Nobody in this big city need be without an overcoat another winter.

With between 4,000 and 5,000 bundles on hand, a total no doubt of not less than 15,000 pieces of wearing apparel, the question comes what to do with them.

PRESIDENT GIVES OUT POSTAL JOBS

WASHINGTON, July 25.—President Wilson today announced the following appointments to the cabinet:

Edward A. Tamm, Chief Justice of the United States.

Charles E. McMillen, Secretary of the Interior.

In Messrs. Wilson, Tamm, McMillen, Rogers, Taft, and Hughes, the President has named the six members of the cabinet who will be sworn in tomorrow.

"A Rubber Chain Tread built on a Powerful Modern Tire"

KEEP A TIRE RECORD

Factory capacity doubled—ample supply of the famous “Chain Treads” now ready, and at the lowest price in their history

Our total factory capacity has been doubled. Now we are ready to supply "Chain Tread" Tires in unlimited quantities at popular prices.

For several years we have built "Chain Tread" Tires for a limited trade, but heretofore we have not been able to produce "Chain Treads" in large quantities.

"Chain Tread" Tires

Safety experts acknowledge our rubber chain tread, built on this powerful modern tire to be an absolutely marvelous anti-skid device.

We challenge any competitor's tire to show you the same combination of real anti-skid protection and low cost per mile. We challenge you to keep a tire record and prove it for yourself. Send your name and address, for a set of Free Tire Record Blanks, to Boston Branch: United States Tire Co., 560 Commonwealth Ave.

"Chain Tread" Tires are sold by Leading Reliable Dealers. Do not accept substitutes.

One of the Crazy Village Ideas Carried Out to Delight the Children.

Fun at the Panama-Pacific Exposition

An Enormous Working Model of the Panama Canal, Showing Ships Passing Through the Locks.

COMPARATIVELY little has been printed about the funny side of the greatest of all international expositions. It is a fact, nevertheless, that the creators of the Panama-Pacific Jumbo among world's fairs are wading the round sum of $10,000,000 on a section of the exhibit called "The Zone," which is believed to have exhausted its ingenuity of the world's best experts in the way of keeping multitudes of people amused.

This intensely human side of the big show—the laughter-provoking side—is on the same gigantic scale as the serious ratio and instructive departments. Some old and personally popular devices are utilized, but invariably with improvements. For instance, the familiar aerial whirling is slung on a plain, lofty central structure with cars swinging like the ribs of a spinning umbrella. It is a fact, nating moth and candle affair. When you take an eccentric flight on this whirling you appear to all beholders like a gauzy-winged insect fluttering about a huge lighted tallow dip.

When you are temporarily wearied of being educated in the artistic and mechanical wonders of the world and feel like tangoing some responsibility from your brain to your legs, you don't go to a plain, ordinary dance hall, but to "Mother Hubbard's Cupboard," and dance on a huge plate set in the floor. Whatever you do at the exposition for fun or for milder recreation has a fascinating "meaning all its own" back of its facilities for amusement.

When on pure amusement bent you find yourself in a veritable topsyturvy land. At no other exposition have crazy villages been so ridiculously demented—crazy trainways, with crazy trolley cars going their crazy way upon them; a perfectedly crazy town pump operated by the craziest possible dummy man; you duck your head to pass under a crazy clothesline bearing men's garments and come face to face with the legend, "Votes for Men"; you are tempted to enter a "Grand Hotel and Cafe" only to find it crisscrossed with dummy guests and dummy waiters; you can visit a wonderful "Giant's Kitchen," where mechanical cook and dishes, pots and pans are all on the same gigantic scale. And these are only a few of the myriad devices to make you laugh—at yourself and at others.

There are milder recreations that are not without their instructive value. A huge working model of the Panama Canal is so extensive that visitors seated in comfortable theatre chairs are carried along the route of the canal upon a moveable platform while a dictaphone at the arm of each chair describes each scene as it comes into view. A novel amusement feature is provided by working submarines boats of sixty tons displacement, which operate in an artificial lagoon. The submarine is a huge inverted pendulum, operating like a giant seesaw, with a great balancing weight on the short end and a great counterweight at the extension of a longer arm. This ride is operated by a man in a three-hatted and twenty-five foot long coat. It is a day, showing an unsurpassed view of the exposition city and the Golden Gate. "Old Nuremberg," a painting costing $25,000, is an art likeness of the city that has been called the "jewel among the ancient cities of Germany." Its historic market place has been produced in detail. In this yet quaint city the "Iron Master," the most terrible means of torture ever conceived, made its first appearance, and is here reproduced from the original, which still exists.

This city was a famous town in the sixteenth century. In its history, it was painted by Albert Dürer, painter; Adam Kraft, goldsmith; Velt, wood carver; Weiser, glass painter; Martin Behaim, discoverer and maker of the first globe; Hans Sachs, whose life was given in Richard Wagner's opera "Die Meistersinger." These are restored in their various activities. Nuremberg is a town of 100,000 people, and Dürer's decorations, its history.

MICE PROVE We Should EAT BUTTER

[illegible]

USING mice as subjects, Dr. O. C. Boxer, of the University of California, Berkeley, has found that mice fed on butter and lard live longer than mice fed on food. The results of his tests indicate that butter is from 10 to 25 per cent more palatable than its boarding-house substitute. The lard tests of mice were so good, Dr. Boxer says, that he is being fed on butter and lard in the laboratory. The effect in a competitive test warrants the percentages noted and indicates that mice, even be raised as the experimenters say, will be fed on butter are growing more rapidly, and some

How to Tell Your Fortune by Your Moles

It stood on its hind legs, however, this monster could easily have broken the upper windows of any ordinary building.

If the dinosaurs had visited lower Broadway to pay their respects to the Mayor, let us say, it would not have been at all impossible for the corythosaurus to have balanced itself on the steps of the City Hall and from that vantage point to have scratched his claws against the Statue of Justice which adorns the top of the structure.

Next in size to the corythosaurus were the two dinosaurs. If these three had marched down Broadway side by side, switching their enormous tails in their characteristic manner, not only would pedestrians have been crowded off the sidewalks, but all projecting stoops and other sidewalk embellishments would have been as effectively demolished as if a cyclone had struck them.

These dinosaurs were equipped with huge castle-like claws which would have enabled them to mount the irregular surfaces of some of the Broadway skyscrapers. We can imagine them making their way slowly but surely up the side of the Flatiron Building, for instance. While the going would have been somewhat difficult, owing to the straight up and down character of the building and the lack of architectural embellishments, the animals could no doubt have obtained a foothold by smashing in windows here and there.

Whether or not the combined weight of these monsters would have demolished the building may be doubted, but it must be remembered that it was not constructed to resist any concentrated strain as such a feat would involve. It is likely, at any rate, that if the building had not been brought thundering to the ground a large part of the structure would have given way under the weight, and the huge dinosaurs would have been precipitated to the street, crashing through the new subway as though it were made of paper, and demolishing many of the smaller structures in the vicinity.

If less destructively bent, the parading dinosaurs would, nevertheless, have worked considerable havoc among Broadway traffic.

No trolley car could for a moment withstand the shock of a collision with one of these living dreadnoughts. The corythosaurus, for instance, was about as long as some of the newest style cars, and had enormous strength. If this animal decided to clear Broadway, one mighty blow with its tail would be sufficient to lift a crowded car from the tracks and send it crashing into the buildings.

A Battle-Royal Between Prehistoric and Modern Animals

Automobiles would have fared equally badly had they attempted to dispute the right of way with the marching dinosaurs. The ankylosaurus would have been particularly dangerous to traffic if he had run amuck. While he wasn't quite as ponderous as some of the others, he was so completely armored that artillery would have had to have been employed to have made any impression on him.

He was like a huge barrel of steel eighteen feet long and six feet in diameter. His head was triangular, covered with bony plates. The entire body was protected, too, with solid bony plates, large on the back and smaller underneath. The ribs and the vertebrae were all fused together in solid formation. His principal weapon of offense was a huge club-like tail, which he could swing with deadly effect.

One can imagine the futile efforts of the police to have captured this monster if he had gone on the rampage on Broadway. Shooting him would have been out of the question. Revolver bullets would have bounced off his bony armor like rubber balls. To have attempted to lasso him or trip him with ropes would have been vain. Big auto-trucks might have been used in an effort to push him along, but the most powerful machines made would have found him immovable. He weighed over twenty tons.

If the dinosaurs refused to line of march up Broadway to Columbus Circle their attention, no doubt, would have been first attracted by the Columbus Monument. How long the column would have withstood their combined attack can be imagined.

More destruction would have followed their attempt to pursue their course along upper Broadway, for their combined weight would, no doubt, have been too much for the pavement which covers the subway to have withstood, and the prehistoric parade would have dropped through. A collision between a rapidly moving express train and the struggling dinosaurs in the subway would have brought about a catastrophe as unusual and as thrilling as it would have been stupendous.

After one or two adventures of this character we can imagine the procession moving eastward toward Central Park, where the trees and foliage would have afforded some of the surroundings to which they were more accustomed. In the course of their wanderings through the park they would, no doubt, have come upon the meadows, and then would have ensued one of the most interesting episodes of their visit—a tussle between the prehistoric monsters and their modern prototypes.

If the dinosaurs escaped this conflict their course might have led them to one of the huge electric plants on the East Side, and there another battle would have taken place. We can imagine the terrified beasts crashing into the big plant and falling blindly on the great revolving dynamos. Some of the machinery, no doubt, would have been speedily placed out of commission, but sooner or later the foolish monsters would have run foul of the current, and the enormous voltage would have resulted in their electrocution. Thus the unholy power of bygone ages would have fallen a victim to the harnesses of modern times.

A FRIEND of mine named Cummings had been feeling poorly for some time and I used to drop in and see him occasionally. One day as I was coming out of the house, Cummings' minister happened to be passing by and asked for the invalid, inquiring if he was under treatment by a physician. I looked at him gravely for a moment and said: "He needs your help more than that of a physician now." Off he went and the doctor soon thereafter exclaimed anxiously: "Poor old gentleman! I believe he is dying!" "Yes," I answered, "he is suffering from insomnia."

0. The first step is to identify the key components of the system. This involves understanding the hardware, software, and data involved. Next, we need to determine the goals and objectives of the project. This will help us to define the scope of the work and to establish a timeline. Finally, we need to develop a plan of action. This will involve identifying the tasks that need to be completed and the resources that will be required. Once the plan is in place, we can begin implementation. This will involve setting up the system, testing it, and monitoring its performance. Finally, we need to evaluate the results of the project. This will involve comparing the actual results with the expected results and identifying any areas for improvement.

Women Soldiers Now on the Firing Line.

T: "Legion of Death," a Regiment of Serbian Women at Rifle Practice Before Being Sent to the Front Against the Austro-German Forces

How They Are Fighting in the Trenches Side by Side with the Men, Undergoing All the Hardships of War, and Being Promoted to Lieutenants, Captains and Colonels Through Their Bravery

FROM time to time since the great war began reports have leaked through of women fighting in the trenches side by side with the men. These reports have been received with more or less incredulity. It did not seem possible that women could undergo the hardships, the complete reversal of all their habits and the primitive manners that in a country as highly civilized as ours.

Truth, however, given way before actual official reports of women decorated and promoted for bravery on the battlefields. It seems now that in Europe the women actually do put on the uniform of the men, fight not only in trenches, out in the cavalry, and in every way measure up to the standard of a soldier.

In fact, this is the case in the Serbian army. A woman soldier, who has been in the trenches for some time, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant. She is now in the trenches, and is being promoted to the rank of captain. These women are not only fighting in the trenches, but they are also being promoted to the rank of colonel.

There was a very good reason for this. The men, who were in the trenches, were being promoted to the rank of lieutenant. The women, who were in the trenches, were being promoted to the rank of captain. The men, who were in the trenches, were being promoted to the rank of colonel. The women, who were in the trenches, were being promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

The Russians could not have been surprised at seeing women soldiers, however. They had seen them in the trenches, and they had seen them in the trenches. They had seen them in the trenches, and they had seen them in the trenches. They had seen them in the trenches, and they had seen them in the trenches.

When the war began, the women were in the trenches. They were in the trenches, and they were in the trenches. They were in the trenches, and they were in the trenches. They were in the trenches, and they were in the trenches.

The Dance Songs of Grace Darling

When Winter's blast grew shrill and chill Grace Darling,
Like the birds,
Fled Southward; and her plumage, too, was quite too
rich for words.
The Palm Beach season, at its height, revealed patrician dames
And debutantes of lineage and wealth, and honied names.
But, Oh, what lack of gaiety! They slept, they lounged, they strolled;
They dined in an aimless way, their smiles discreetly cold.
Grace Darling's Fox Trot banished gloom and filled all hearts with cheer.

Motion Picture Drama

The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "CRAIG KENNEDY" Stories

Introducing Miss Pearl White,
Mr. Arnold Daly and
"Craig Kennedy"

Cast of Leading Characters in the Motion Picture
Reproduction by the Popular Pathe Players

ELAINE DODGE	Miss Pearl White
CRAIG KENNEDY	Mr. Arnold Daly
PERRY BENNETT	Mr. Sheldon Lewis

Everything you read here to-day you can see in fascinating Pathe Motion Pictures at the Motion Picture Theatres this week. Next Sunday another chapter of "The Exploits of Elaine" and new Pathe reels.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

THE New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes.

The principal clue to the criminal is the missing letter which is always signed "The Gluehand."

The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Grag Kennedy, the detective.

Grag Kennedy is the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man.

Enraged at the determined effort which the police are making to put an end to his crimes, the Gluehand (and, as this strange criminal is known, resorts to almost all of the most diabolical schemes to escape).

Grag Kennedy is the master of the story tells of a new plot against his lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from

A STATEMENTS were being given out on Saturday afternoon, and I was standing along with several other reporters outside the door of the White House.

"I am not going to say anything about the CIA," said Mr. Kennedy.

"The CIA is a very important part of our national defense," he added.

"Without leaving claim to such a distinction, I took the paper and read:

What Is It

"Suppose you take that assignment," the editor answered, raising a possible story.

"I took it with alacrity, flinging out the quick address by elevated and surface to reach the address."

"The trolley indicated from the street and I hurried up the street until I came to the house, a neat, unpresentable one. Looking at the address on the card, I was made aware of the fact that I was in the wrong house."

"I must say that I could scarcely believe that the poisoned kissa's taste, for the woman who had opened the door certainly was extraordinarily nice."

"And you really were—put out by a kiss?" I queried, as she led me into a neat sitting room.

"Absolutely, as much as if it had been by one of those old-fashioned, sticky, sugary kisses," she replied confidently, hastening on to describe the

It was beyond me.
"What is your telephone?" I asked.
"Surely," she answered
I visited the laboratory. "Is that you, Craig?"
I inquired.
"Yes, Walter," he answered, recognizing my voice.
"Say, Craig," I asked breathlessly, "what sort of kites would suffocate a person?"
My only answer was an uproarious laugh from him at the idea.
"I don't know," but I've got the assignment from the Star—and I'm out here in interviewing a woman about it. It's all right to laugh—but here I am. I've found a case—and I'm in a fix. I wish you'd explain the thing, eh?"
"Oh, all right," Walter replied indulgently.
"I'll meet you as soon as I can and help you."
I hung up the receiver with an air of satisfaction. At least now I would get an explanation of the woman's queer story.
I picked up the telephone and said confidently to Frank, Craig Kennedy, the scientific department, "I'm coming out here."
"Good. That fellow who attacked me ought to be shown up. All women may not be as fortunate as I!"
We waited patiently. Her story certainly was remarkable. She remembered every detail of the incident—and then, as she said, she was blankness.
The bell rang and the woman hastened to the Kennedy Gazes at Elaine Overcome. Is This the End?

"Hello, Walter," he greeted. Just then the telephone interrupted.
"This is certainly a most remarkable case." "Yes," she reasserted quickly. "Excuse me Craig," I said, introducing him, and telling a second.
briefly what I had learned. She answered the call. "Oh—why—yes, he's here. Do you want to speak to him? Mr. here.
"And you actually mean to say that a kiss Jameson. It's the Star."

The day before, in the suburban house, the Clutching Hand had been talking to two of his emissaries, an attractive young woman and a man.

"They were Florry Florio and Dan the Dude," "Now, I want you to get Kennedy," he said. "The way to do it is to separate Kennedy and Elaine."

"All right, chief, we'll do it," they replied.

"I've rigged it so that you'll reach him through Jameson, understand?"

They nodded eagerly as he told them the suburban story.

Clutching Hand had scarcely left when Florry Florio began by getting published in the papers the story which had seen.

"I'll tell you," he said, "I came up from the suburban house. Having got me up to promise to see her, she had scarcely turned from the telephone when Dan the Dude walked in from the back door."

"He's coming," she said.

Den was carrying a huge snail head with a black wire attached to it. Under the snail arm was a coil of wire which he had connected to the inside of the head.

"That's all," he exclaimed. Then, pointing to the head, he said, "It's all ready. See how I fixed it? Hit that ought to please the Chief."

Den moved quickly to the mantle and placed the snail head on the wall.

"That's all," he said. "I'll call."

"There," he said, unscrewing one of the beautiful brown glass eyes of the stag.

Back of it could be seen a camera shutter. Den worked the camera several times to see whether it was all right.

"One of those new quick shutter cameras," he explained.

Then he ran a couple of wires along the molding, under the room and into a closet, where he made the connection with a sort of "SHUTTER" and "WIND FILM" buttons.

"Now, Fitter," he said, coming out of the closet, "I'll tell you what to do. When the flood of sunlight into the room, you see, I want you to stand here—then, do your little trick. Get me?"

"Yes, yes. Fitter," she laughed.

HEALTH IS THE PATH OPENER TO SUCCESS

THE word "health" is an Anglo-Saxon term, meaning man's natural condition. Health is natural or normal. Disease is unnatural or abnormal. Health is the natural result of right living. Disease is the result of abnormal and irregular living or living under wrong mental or physical conditions, or both.

Health and harmony have their rise in the same word. Sundry and sundry are closely related. That is to say, if you are in harmony, in every way you will be sane. Unsanitary conditions breed insanity. In sanity is abnormal, unreasonable, unregulated condition of mind, where thought is not connected or related. Sanity implies a right understanding of the conditions that surround us, with due deference to the rights and opinions of other people.

Hygiene has a little more extended meaning than sanitation. It refers not only to physical condition, but to psychological surroundings. Psychology is the science of mind. Psychology is the science of the emotions, or the tides that play through the human heart.

Hygiene was the Goddess of Hygieia. The Goddess Hygieia came to us from far off Greece, where a hundred years before Christ she was worshipped and immortalized for "th and happiness. The Greeks did not know of "Health," the word hygiene covering the subject. Hygieia meant the gracious smile of the Goddess Hygieia.

When the Goddess Hygieia was with you in your life, you did not get sick, you worked thoroughly and well. When she was not with you, you suffered and were not well. The Goddess Hygieia was the spirit of the good mood, the spirit of the good countenance. The Goddess Hygieia.

Today we understand now better than ever before that the mind plays a big part in bodily well-being. People who are working and succeeding, who are planning, devising and putting forth effort and seeing their plans unfold, are well. Circulation is complete, digestion good, elimination proper, sleep sound.

If we are distressed in body and the tide is running against us, we struggle day by day and make no headway. There is a misunderstanding with our friends and we think we have enemies. Who are planning our undoing, then the smile of Hygieia is withdrawn and the current of our life runs away. Sickness may follow, then disease.

Dr. Wm. Mitchell, who passed away a short time ago, lived eighty-four, was one of the most successful physicians of modern times. Dr. Mitchell once said: "There are over six hundred diseases listed in the medical books, but the fact is, strictly speaking, there is no such thing as a disease. Disease is the result of a cause, and a long condition of living, a long condition of living, in which we call diseases. Then when the person gets one disease and is reduced to vitality other diseases seem to follow it. It is the same and take place and we get a 'complication'."

Dr. Mitchell's idea was that medicine for the most part was merely palliative. In order to cure disease you had to remove the cause. People overworked, hopelessly in debt, distressed in mind through any cause, are sure to be sick a part of the time.

There are two general kinds of diseases—functional and organic. Ninety-nine people out of a hundred who go to a physician have merely some functional disorder. Stomach, liver, lungs, eyes, ears, nose do not function naturally. For instance, a cold in the head should not be classed as a disease. It is a result of lowered vitality, coming with a sudden change in temperature, causing a temporary contraction of the membranes. If one thinks too much, he will usually tell just when and where and how he caught cold.

You do not catch cold by going out of doors in a draught, because if you are in a joyous mood you find the outdoors, although it may be very cold, stimulating. But if you are depressed in spirit, worried and if the cold wind blows in your face, eating and have not been getting, quite enough sleep, you will catch cold either in a hot room or a cold one, through inability to adjust yourself to new conditions.

To go to a physician under these conditions seems to make people silly and absurd. We would live in such a way that we do not catch cold, and, if we do catch cold, the very best treatment is to cut down eating one-half, omit meat entirely from our diet, and eat fruit instead. "Starve a fever and stuff a cold" is half bad advice. Most ailments can be started out.

A man once said: "You are certainly right about wrong mental conditions bringing about disease. If I have a quarrel with my wife I have generalized eyestrain, a cold in the head, or sores."

"Can you take your choice of these?" he was asked. And he said: "No, I am obliged to take the one that fate sends and sometimes I have all three at once."

Under these conditions, as a sensible adviser, would you tell this man to use violent force for relief, an eyewash for his eyes, or a nasal douche for his cold in the head? Probably not. You would say: "Do not quarrel with your wife," and this is only another way of expressing the philosophy of Dr. Wm. Mitchell. When he said that if we would avoid disease we must avoid the disturbing cause.

Disease merely means lack of, or when

And Health Is Almost Entirely a Matter of Mind. People Who Are Overworked, Hopelessly in Debt, Distressed in Mind, Are Sure to Be Sick a Part of the Time. A Quarrel Can Give You a Cold in the Head or Rheumatism. To Succeed in Life You Must Be Healthy, and to Be Healthy You Must Be Happy, Hopeful, Earnest and Courageous.

health obtains through the body we are at ease, that is, we are not aware that we have physical organs. The healthy man doesn't know he has a stomach.

Within forty years, the physicians of the world have evolved a brand new "Internal Medicine." The medicines given forty years ago are to-day practically obsolete, and yet the physicians that were absolutely sure they were right, and they had laws passed legalizing their methods of treatment, and any physician who did not belong to the orthodox school was anathema, illegitimate and beyond the pale. Yet we have seen the homeopaths accepted and placed on a parity with the allopaths, just as we now accept the affirmation of a Quaker or a freethinker as equal to the oath of the orthodox.

The sick are to-day regarded as just as safe in the hands of a homeopath as in the hands of an allopath. This is the legal view of the subject, and life insurance companies who have allopath examiners, who surely have prejudices in the matter, do not regard an allopathic who has a homeopathic family physician as unsafe risk. Osteopathy had its days of persecution, but now it is legalized in most of the States.

For a time Christian Scientists were under the ban. If a Christian Scientist died, it was asumed that if an orthodox physician had been employed the man would have lived on indefinitely. We now say that such reasoning is not sound, and we allow the parent, the guardian, or the individual to choose his own physician. The insurance companies do not differentiate against the Christian Scientist.

He is regarded as an eminently safe and desirable risk.

We have discovered that all drugs have two effects, immediate and delayed. The immediate effect may be beneficial and give relief and the reaction may be decidedly deleterious. So there is a whole round of diseases where a physician can tell whether the disease was caused by a gross disobedience of the laws of health, or is a result of medication taken to relieve another disease. Powerful drugs leave traces of poisoning in the system, and in the course of time may bring about an actual disease.

Strictly speaking, the only actual disease is an organic one; that is, where the structure of an organ has deteriorated until it loses its capacity to act normally. Functional disorders, if continued, will lead to a breakdown of the tissues, and then we get an organic disease where the offending organ may have to be removed by the surgeon's knife in order to keep it from poisoning the well springs of being.

Right living tends to prevent this unkind condition when surgery is necessary. The best physicians of modern times recognize that there is a certain degree of truth in all the various schools of medicine. They also recognize the great and beautiful truths of Christian Science and mental science. Many able physicians who cannot accept the theology of Christian Science realize the practical common sense that there is in it. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," is eminently a scientific maxim.

The happy, joyous, courageous, hopeful mood reacts on the body and health follows. Faith in ourselves, faith in our fellows, faith in the Divinity that rules the world, a belief that everything is coming out all right, that there is no devil but fear, and that no one can harm us but ourselves is eminently scientific.

"I and my Father are one" is interpreted to mean that we are a part of the great Intelligence that rules the world. This was Emerson's idea. It was the philosophy of transcendentalism. It was also the philosophy of certain schools in Greece in the olden time. Marcus Aurelius the Roman Emperor, and Epictetus the Roman slave, possessed the same philosophy. Marcus Aurelius said, "When you get up in the morning, say to yourself, 'This day I will live as becomes a man.' Epictetus said, 'Each day you will meet with disagreeable people. Unpleasant things will happen, appointments will come, disappointments and ingratitude may be your portion; but about these we must rise and be superior to every circumstance.'"

And then, who can forget the words of Robert

Louis Stevenson: "The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undisturbed, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

These thoughts relating to right thinking and right living are beautiful, right and excellent, but they are not quite enough. First, every individual should have an occupation, a business, a vocation. Call it a job, if you wish, and it is just as beautiful to get a job as it is to accept a situation. Every individual should earn his living, and to earn his living he must do something for humanity. He must be a good servant and add to the welfare and happiness of the world. Otherwise, the mental conditions are not complete.

Work is man's great blessing. There must be an excuse, a reason, something that gets you up in the morning before seven o'clock, that gets you down to a certain place on time. This is your job. Thank heaven for it! Hold it by doing your work well, for all good work is a preparation for better work. Any man who has a job has a chance. Healthy, happy people are people who work. Yet every day you should have a little play spell out in the open.

Then, also, we should cultivate a sense of sublimity, which is an exaltation of spirit where forgetfulness of self comes through joy. These things bring about the sense of sublimity, concerning which Edmund Burke wrote a book of six hundred pages.

The sense of sublimity has been called "the bath of the mind." Every day listen to beautiful music, look upon a beautiful picture, or read a little from great and good books. Then besides your job have a hobby. Your vocation is your regular work, your avocation is your hobby. In Pittsburgh lives a man who worked in the iron mills and whose hobby was the grinding of lenses for telescopes, and he became the greatest lens maker in the world. Spinoza, one of the world's great philosophers, one of a persecuted race, was a gardener and he made spectacles as an avocation and studied philosophy for a like reason, and his name is deathless. In The Hague sits his form in undying bronze, and yet the man was just a gardener, but his spirit roamed the universe.

Benjamin Franklin was one of the best educated men the world had ever seen. He had his work and he had his hobby. He could work, play, study, laugh, and his heart was full of sympathy. Sympathy for others takes our mind off of ourselves. We forget our troubles in looking out on the world of doers and workers in kindness and sympathy. As a general rule men who love nature, whose hearts go out to plants, flowers, trees, animals, who study geology and the stars live long and are well. Such were the three Herschels, and one of these, Caroline Herschel, made the century run. She lived to be a hundred, happy, sane, sensible, always well, always at work. Caroline Herschel was a musician, an astronomer, a gardener, and when she was eighty-five some callers went to see her and found her on a ladder painting her house. She joyfully explained to them she was doing it for two reasons. One was because she wanted to "get up in the world," and so she climbed the ladder, and the other was, she didn't want any man to do for her what she could do for herself.

The willingness to work, the pride in being able to accomplish, the sense of sublimity formed by covering the stars, the joy in her music rounded out her life and makes the story complete.

So the summing up of the secret of good health is this: Get a job, have a hobby, realize that you are a part of all we see or hear or feel. Believe in yourself, believe in your philosophy, have faith in the Power that rules the world. Eat sparingly, breathe deeply, work steadily. Then every organ of the body will act harmoniously, and all good things will be yours.

Teach Every American Boy to Shoot, Says Major Higginson

The need of an adequate naval and army reserve for the United States was the text from which Major Henry L. Higginson preached the most interesting and powerful sermon which Massachusetts legislators have heard this year. There is a bill now before the Legislature calling for the investigation by a commission to consider the question of creating a military reserve in Massachusetts.

Major Higginson fought through the Civil War. He bears on his cheek a badge of honor—the scar of a sword thrust received in battle. He knows war as perhaps no other citizen of Massachusetts knows it. He is a man of business. He is not an alarmist. What he says on any subject is always interesting and important. What he says on the subject of being prepared for war as the best means of preventing war should be read by every man, woman and child in Massachusetts.

The Sunday AMERICAN is able to print in full today Major Higginson's message to the people of the State on the need of being prepared.

By MAJOR HENRY LEE HIGGINSON.

I am for peace.

At the outset let me refer to the story of the president of the peace society, who said: "If they don't want peace we'll make 'em."

That reflects my attitude.

I conceive it to be the duty of our government to teach the boys how to shoot; to teach them to obey orders; to teach them the very necessary duty of how to take care of themselves.

Such an instruction would do them good as men. It would teach them to obey. It would make them respect their fellows.

England and France were not prepared, were not ready for war. It was perfect folly.

I am not so sure that we won't get into it.

In 1812 we were defeated by half a division of Englishmen. We had men enough, but they were not properly trained. They were courageous, but they did not know what to do.

If such a condition is allowed to continue we may get a good dressing. Would you want to see our ports, would you want to see Philadelphia and New York bombarded? That is a great chance of it.

No one who has seen war wants more of it. I say we want to avoid that.

We want plenty of men.

We want a sufficient supply of ammunition. I say

We should have a million rifles.

We should have a navy so large that enemies will not attack us. We do not want any ships to be shot at.

Switzerland is the only happy place in Europe because Switzerland has a military reserve. When I visit the people of Switzerland I see men of war, the other nations of the Old World recognize that Switzerland is a neutral nation. And today Switzerland is a happy nation.

I not only feel that the boys of this State should be even further. I would like to see the boys of this State in form of military training. I would teach them how to shoot so accurately that they could draw and kill a man in 100 yards.

I do not say that the boys of this State should be trained in the use of the rifle. I say that they should be trained in the use of the rifle.

The boys of this State should be trained in the use of the rifle. When his muscles begin to harden, when he is old enough to realize that he must obey orders and when such a training would be beneficial to him through the results it would attain when he entered man's estate.

Our country is of more consequence than the life of any man in this room. There is not a man in the State who is worth more than the State. We amount to nothing when compared to the State or nation. We should be inculcated with the spirit of patriotism. We should stand ready to serve when our service is necessary and we should be equipped by military experience to serve properly.

War is a terrible thing. It is a terrible thing. It is a terrible thing.

No one who has seen war wants more of it. I say we want to avoid that.

We want plenty of men. We want a sufficient supply of ammunition. I say tract the country.

The military reserve will naturally and logically follow. Then we can say to ourselves with some degree of satisfaction, "We are prepared."

If the military feeling "got out" I would not be afraid that it would start us into a war. I am more confident that it would keep us out of one.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PATRONS AND THE PUBLIC

In offering Waldron's Casino to the theatre-going public of Boston, Manager Waldron requests your kind approval of his efforts to add to this city's present rapid progression.

Manager Waldron, who personally manages the Casino, also operates theatres in every large city in the United States and Canada, and he has been untiring in his efforts to advance his theatres as well as his many attractions to the highest standard of perfection, to the effect that "Musical Travels" or "Burlesque" has become a most important factor in the field of present-day amusements.

Just as the late E. F. Kelly and his associates rejuvenated "Vaudeville" from the despoiled "variety," so has Charles H. Waldron successfully revised Burlesque—crude, rough lines have been smoothed into meritorious humor and the man who beamed his face with varied-colored paint and wore mistle clothes has been replaced by the comedian who is capable of entertaining with intelligent and becoming material. The attractions appearing at Waldron's Casino are most elaborately embellished scenically, while the costumes and gowns displayed represent only exclusive importations from Europe's most renowned modistes.

Therefore, the various advantages offered by Waldron's Casino as a modern, up-to-date playhouse, and the attractions being of the highest quality, Manager Waldron makes a decided bid for "LADY PATRON-AGE," believing that the light, airy musical travesty, with its beauty, song and wholesome wit and humor is particularly adapted to their delicate taste. Ladies can attend any performance at Waldron's Casino with the assurance that the entertainment will conform strictly to the MOST REFINED FEATURES.
